Whether it's a dripping tap or a complete redesign, you'll always receive the exact same expertise and friendly service that the business has built an incredible reputation for. And whilst it's recent rebranding is still in its early years, the specialists behind it certainly aren't - as founder, Craig Moore, explains:

"My business partner and I have been working together for the last 10 years, so everything else has followed through to Taylormade Boilers & Bathrooms.

I started in this field when I was 14 - I had left school with no qualifications to my name and went to live with my aunt and uncle in Penn. It was there that I first got involved with the plumbing for my uncle's company, which led to me completing an apprenticeship and then gaining a multitude of experience with various businesses afterwards.

At 25 I set up my own business and took on my current business partner, Jamie, as an apprentice. 10 years on and we've built a fantastic clientele, developed expertise you wouldn't find anywhere else, and now have a new apprentice, Alex."

And it's no wonder that the business has done so well over the years. The team behind Taylormade Boilers & Bathrooms offer a full and unique service that many clients would really struggle to find elsewhere.

"Whatever the job may be, we take it from the very start and stay until the very end - so this is a 100% complete service. This allows us to give our customers a reliable time frame and have full control over every aspect and any issue that may arise."

It also means that customers embarking on bathroom or kitchen redesigns will be able to skip the stresses of juggling multiple tradesmen through the process. Taking every minute detail into consideration - from tile choices and flooring to bath sizes and room layouts - Taylormade Boilers & Bathrooms will work closely with customers to ensure their project is everything they dreamed of.

"It's not just about the nitty gritty of the plumbing, but the design aspect as well. We really get into depth with colour, texture and finishes, such as lighting. A glance over our social media pages will only start to tell of all the differing projects we've successfully completed - from finding the best way to maximise space in smaller rooms, to big refurbishments."

For many customers, redesigns can be incredibly daunting. How can you best get the image in your head to become a reality? Or perhaps you're not entirely sure of the new design that your room should take? This is where Taylormade Boilers & Bathrooms will put you completely at ease and, most importantly, will wholly understand you and your needs.

"First and foremost, we treat our clients as friends - having a laugh with them; giving familiarity; getting to know them and what reassurance or help they need.

Many clients will start out nervous about the process, or unsure of whether the results will be what they hoped. But our personal focus ensures the best guidance, ideas and understanding for each individual. We always deliver on the job at hand and what's more, clients often stay friends after."

And whilst their complete service will inevitably spare you all the stress of having to sort things yourself, you certainly aren't pushed to a side either. Communication and openness are key at Taylormade Boilers & Bathrooms, and you'll be kept in the loop at all times.

"We're always transparent about every aspect of the job. We talk openly about the process; where the wastage will go, what the time frame will look like, and so on.

And there's no limit to how often we'll check in - whether it's a particularly nervous client who prefers regular updates 2-3 times a day - nothing is too much to us.

This definitely helps clients to relax and put their trust in the process, but at the same time, we'll always communicate before going ahead with anything, so clients are still very much in full control."

With 5 months of full bookings, it's clear that their impeccable service and guarantee to go the extra mile is a promise that all clients are clearly in agreement with.
